IS INFLATION REPUDIATION?

[From the New York Times]

It is to be noticed that the Democratic organs in Ohio do not seriously deny that their party is in favor of repudiation as well as inflation, but some of the more cautious of the Republican speakers seem to think it necessary to concede that the Democrats are not repudiationists This is a mistake. The Democrats of Ohio, who stand on the platform of the State convention are repudiators, pure and simple They have declared themselves so, and they must bear the odium of their own declarations Moreover, it will be found, should inflation be tolerated for any reason or by any party, that it leads as inevitably to repudiation as water runs down hill

In the first place, it would be an act of naked repudiation to increase the issue of legal-tender notes under any pretext whatever The limit of the notes is fixed by law It was so fixed in order to give a certain degree of security to those who held pledges of the national credit in any form The limit cannot be passed without the violation of an expressed obligation, and it can not be repudiated, without disguise or qualification we should like to know what would be In the next place the Government has promised that the greenbacks shall be redeemed in specie on the 1st day of January, 1879. If that is to be done, no more notes can be issued between this time and that. An increased issue would therefore necessarily involve repudiation of this solemn promise

Again, in order to provide for the fulfillment of the promise we have referred to Congress or provided that whenever $300 currency should be issued to the national banks $80 of legal tenders should be retired and cancelled by the Treasury The Democrats of Ohio demand that this "policy be abandoned" But this policy is a part of the contract contained in the law, with the holder of the legal tenders To abandon it and to allow the legal tenders to remain undiminished while their value is increased through an increase of the total volume of the currency, is an act of bad faith It is not distinctly and in form repudiation but it is so in spirit and in substance

There is a marginal definition of repudiation, to which the Ohio Democrats might like to confine those who accuse them of proposing this crime It is that repudiation consists in the out and-out refusal to pay the debts of the Government, whether in notes or bonds But this limitation of the offense will not shield them The proposition of the Democrats to repeal the law of last winter which promises redemption in 1879 is in substance a refusal to pay the notes of the Government according to the contract with the holders The law of last winter fixed a date for the fulfillment of the promises previously undefined in the face of every greenback, and the payment at that date has become as much a part of the obligation of the note as the date but you must pay which it at first contained To repeal that law is substantially repudiation

In addition to this evidence that the Democrats mean repudiation we have other and direct but quite as important It is a fact that the authors of the Ohio Democratic platform this year are the men who moved the national Democratic platform in 1868 and the Ohio platform of last year Both of these declared in favor of repudiation boldly and with no prevarication The only reason why this was not done again this year was that the inflation plank was quite enough If carried out, to accomplish repudiation as well To these it was perfectly plain that one deliberate act of inflation would remove all obstacles to repudiation A nation which could reverse the first would not stick at the second A Congress shameless enough to adopt the first would have no scruples about the second The one is every whit as bad as the other. There is no moral distinction between the two

And there is just as little practical distinction The issue of more legal-tender notes at time of profound peace when all sections of war, or of the disturbance that followed it the war is gone, especially such an issue in contradiction to the Constitution as a mere bankrupt's device, would place this country on a level with Turkey The credit of the Government would be completely gone Our bonds would come back from our markets in a flood. With new issues of greenbacks, these would constantly depreciate in value until the payment of the bonds in gold would demand a sum so enormous that no administration capable of undertaking it function as the first place would dare to try to pay them in

From every point of view we choose to adopt repudiation is seen to follow the application of the Ohio Democratic principles Do the people of this country fully understand what must be the consequences if even a set our stain is put on our National honor? They need not flatter themselves that this honor is an abstraction a mere creation of the imagination, devised by theorists It is practical a reality as the business credit of a merchant. National honor is the measure of ability of the nation as a whole and of corporate bodies in the nation, as a rule to command confidence If national honor be broken down corporate credit cannot long survive In Pennsylvania, for instance, a very large amount of English capital is invested in railways and coal mines. If the country were once to commit itself to inflation and repudiation that capital would be withdrawn as rapidly as possible, and the enterprises which it now sustains will be allowed to sink This is just as certain as that the readers of this paper would take their money out of a bank if they thought the bank was about to fail. And what is true of Pennsylvania is true of Illinois and Ohio and Missouri, and more or less of every State in the Union. For many years we have been borrowing, in one form or another, from abroad. One distinct act of bad faith—possibly the mere victory of the inflationists in Ohio—would set those who have loaned us money to getting it back again, and would bar our getting more. A general conviction that repudiation is possible in this country would be a disaster to which the panic of 1873, or all those which have preceded it, would be as nothing It is largely for the people of Ohio to say whether such a disaster shall be invited or rendered impossible.

It has been suggested to us that the insulting references to Gen. Conner printed in the Commercial have not been authorized or approved by Gen. Roberts or his friends, but are published by the editor out of spite for having been refused a place on the Democratic ticket, and with a desire to revenge the slight by provoking strictures upon the Gubernatorial candidate. The performance is quite characteristic of that paper.

If we read THE BANGOR WHIG correctly, it don't desire to invite the Republicans who voted for Mr Greeley back to the Republican fold, but prefers to call them Judases. May we be allowed to suggest that our church isn't so crowded but that we may cordially welcome any who may express a wish to join?—[Portland Press

The Press has not only failed to "read correctly," but it must have taken pains to thus impute to us words which we have not uttered We have expressed no such opinion, and no reader with twenty-five per cent less than average intelligence could have placed such a misconstruction upon the question which we put to the Lewiston Journal That paper, in commenting upon the statement that a well-known politician in a neighboring county has given both parties assurances of his fealty and support, remarked that many such professions are made every much in the same manner that Judas took great pains to profess friendship for the Savior by a kiss, when he was meditating his death," but the Journal complacently rounded off its remark by reference to the ability of the individual and the opinion that his presence in the Legislature will be of great public service We cannot doubt that the Press understood the purport of our inquiry as to whether the Journal really thought the presence of "Judases" of 'ability' in the Legislature could serve to the public welfare The characterization was not made by us, as the Press well knows, but if justly applied by the Journal we are amply warranted in questioning its views of desirable qualifications for the public service As for the crowding of our political church, while we have a cordial welcome for all honorable accessions, whether of those who have been temporarily estranged, or others won over from the opposition by the worthiness of our principles, we are much more concerned in recognizing the services, preserving the confidence and awakening the zeal of those who polled a Republican vote of nearly seventy two thousand for Sidney Perham in 1872, than in drumming for recruit or patronizing professional trimmers

In view of the election of Gen Plaisted to Congress the names of several gentlemen have been mentioned as candidates for the position of Attorney-General, prominently those of Hon. Lucilius Emery, of Ellsworth, and Hon Hiram Knowlton of Portland Mr Emery is the law partner of Hon Eugene Hale, has served several terms in the Legislature, being a member of the last Senate, and will be strongly supported by his section Mr Knowlton is also a prominent lawyer has had considerable legislative experience and served as a member of the Executive Council. Both are gentlemen of character and ability and either would fill the position with credit

THE SECTARIAN ISSUE.

[From Harper's Weekly]

A letter from Bishop M'Quaid of the diocese of Rochester, to the Boston Pilot, proves beyond doubt that, however discussed the modification of our school system which he and his associates are trying to secure may be, the end sought is the establishment of Catholic schools to be supported by the public funds. Not to do the Bishop injustice, we here quote his words:

"I do not quite clearly understand what are your propositions with respect to schools for Catholic children in our diocese" [We ask attention to the emphasis italicised] It can mean schools with little less Protestantism in them than the public schools now have, you and I are not of one mind The schools that I am contending for are schools in which the time, the influence, and the incidental teachings, under Catholic teachers, are as pervading and as effective as the non Catholic home and influence are left in the common schools It does not follow that the recitation of catechism lessons should take place during school hours It does not follow that teachers in Catholic schools, even if religious, should be exempt from examination, nor but the progress of the scholars in secular learning should not be matter of frequent inspection on the part of the State authorities But to sacrifice the Catholic tone and influence in the schools you might as well ask the children to live without air, or that all the education comes from the daily atmosphere in which they grow up, and as more essential to the soul's welfare than the oxygen of the air is to the body's life"

After this plain statement, we do not see how the voters of New York can make any concession whatever to the Catholic claims. Bishop M'Quaid means that the State shall pay for teaching the Roman Catholic faith. We may try to imagine this great Empire commonwealth maintaining the Catholic tone and atmosphere in the school-room The Bishop may dream such a dream, but he will never see it become a reality.

AGRICULTURAL GAMBLING.

We would like to inquire of the Press if it is true as reported, that the officers of the society sold to parties the privilege of "pool-selling" at the recent Fair, and if so what became of the proceeds? In which that paper and our own united when a similar breach of the laws was commenced by the same organization in this city We have noticed no strictures in the Press this year —[Bangor Whig.

We think THE WHIG would have found in unobjectionable allusion to "pool selling" at the State Fair in our report We reserved the matter for a more extended and "abrupt" notice until another time. We are under the necessity of informing THE WHIG that "pool-selling" was not openly carried on in defiance of the State laws against gambling, and openly opposite the grand stand on the fair grounds It was, we understand permitted by the Executive Committee although a majority of the trustees were in our spoken hostility to this public sort of gambling as are all of the better class of farmers in the State The tendency of the age is toward speculation and when games of chance have the quasi sanction of many of the leading men of the State, it is not a matter of surprise that the distinction between legitimate business transactions and gambling fades away. The boy who stakes a dollar by a lucky venture in purchasing a "pool" is quite likely to follow his fortune to the gambling house and there to ruin, since the professionals hold nearly all the chances in their hands No thoughtful man will willingly take his son to any fair where an opportunity is given to witness the workings of a game of chance like "pool-selling." If we must have this sort of gaming, let the present laws be abolished respecting gambling and admit to fair grounds for the practice of their respective industries, all those eager gentlemen who are anxious to earn an honest penny by the three card trick, wheels of fortune and the like which must be regarded as legitimate employment when pool-selling is pronounced a harmless amusement.—Portland Press.

The Press states that the gambling was "permitted" by officers of the Society, but it does not say whether it was authorized for a money consideration paid in hand, as has been reported. We regard that as the worst part of the business.

One of our Bangor subscribers took it very much to heart, because we remarked that the Democrats of Dexter did not behave in such an unseemly manner as according to all accounts, did some of them in that city. He said that the persons who made the disturbance in THE WHIG office in no way represented the party, and that their actions were condemned by all respectable Democrats. We are glad to hear that this is so, and it certainly pleases us to know that the notorious and disreputable Emery does not receive the endorsement of the Democratic people of Saugerville when he takes sides with a horde of gourmet rowdies. It pleases us to know that the decency of the party repudiates the stuff that daily emanates from Central street.—Dexter Gazette.

"Condemned by all respectable Democrats," but approved and encouraged by the Commercial and its coterie. Let it so stand.

THE ST. JOHN EXHIBITION! This unusual success has induced the Managers to continue the Exhibition until Wednesday evening Oct. 6. An immense number of Machines are in position, illustrating the actual process of manufacture in the various industries represented The number of distinct varieties of goods entered exceeds 1000; the number of different articles on exhibition will exceed 8500; The total area of space covered by exhibitors is over 20,000 square feet.

We are informed that the business of the Maine Central the past three months has been better than during the corresponding months of 1874, and that the road is earning sufficient money above its running expenses to easily pay the interest on its obligations —Portland Press.

THE BLACK HILLS

The Commissioners Unable to Negotiate a Treaty

NEW YORK Oct. 1 A special dated Red Cloud Agency Sept 29th, contains the following The Council closed this afternoon, with the abandonment of negotiations by the Commissioners with the Sioux Indians of the Missouri Indians are now on their way home. Yesterday in a long talk the Indians repeated a list of their wants, as Red Dog, spotted Tail and Spotted Bear had done on Monday They desired, in return for the Black Hills, the support of the nation for seven generations, or over 200 years. In addition they wanted yoke cattle, cows, sheep, horses, hogs, fowls, farming utensils, guns and ammunition, and, moreover, enumerated a hundred articles of food and clothing which they wished as annuity goods. They wanted houses, schools, saw mills and civilized furniture. They declined to permit any other roads to the Black Hills but Custar's trail from Bismarck. The portion which they would cede to the Government was that where timber exists, reaching the foot of the hills. A request for Catholic missions was repeated and emphasized. Red Cloud wanted to live in peace, and asked that the bringing of whiskey on to the Reservation by Mexicans be stopped.

The Propositions Rejected.

Senator Allison read formal propositions on the part of the United States: 1st, to purchase licenses to mine and grow stock in the Black Hills country, paying $500,000 per annum, one fourth to be expended for objects beneficial to the civilization of the Sioux; 2d, to purchase the Black Hills country for $6,250,000 in fifteen annual installments, of which $100,000 to be annually expended for purposes of civilization; 3d, that the President shall designate three routes to the Black Hills country; 4th, to purchase the Big Horn region in Wyoming, for $50,000 annually for ten years, to be paid in good American cows and other live stock and such implements of husbandry as are contained in stock farming and as may be deemed advisable by the President. In case of acceptance of the propositions $50,000 to be expended in presents for the Indians.

The Offers Rejected.

Spotted Tail said he spoke for all the tribes and declared the amounts offered too small. Lone Horn rode into the Council and claimed to own all the country. The Indians felt insulted and tried to kill Lone Horn, who has hid in the bank along the White river.

The Commissioners went through hand shaking with the Indians, and the Council was closed in a friendly manner.

THE ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE.

The Banquet—Speeches by Gen. Grant, Sherman and Others.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 1. The reunion of the Army of the Tennessee closed with a banquet last night. The President occupied the central table with Gen. Sherman on his left and Senator Wright on his right. In response to the toast "The President of the United States," Gen. Grant responded in a few words returning thanks for the compliment. Speeches were made by Gens. Sherman, Pope and Byrne Sherman dwelt at some length on the origin of the movement resulting in his march to the sea. Referring to his book he said he wrote the book believing it to be true; he wanted to write while men could correct his errors. In reply to the criticisms that he should have gone from Atlanta by way of Augusta, he declared that at that time no one ever proposed or hinted at such a thing. Now, he said, it is a very easy thing to go from Atlanta to the sea and many men are brave enough to do it, but none of them in those days tried it or knew of a better way than was taken The General's speech was not concluded until after midnight.

Nearly all the members of the society left for home on the early morning train. The President and party go to Denver.

NEW POSTAL CARDS. Several of the new postal cards arrived for the first time at the post-office in this city last evening. The frame or border of this emblem consists of two upright Roman consular fasces, connected at the top and bot om by strips, the upper one of which has the words "U. S. Postage," and the lower one the words "One Cent." On the upper left-hand corner is the monogram "U S.," crossed by a ribbon, bearing the words "Postal Card" in bold Roman. Under this device is the notice, in small Gothic letters, "Write the address on this side—the message on the other." The border surrounding the face of the present card is dispensed with. The new card is the same size (3 by 5½ inches) and weight of the old one, and the color of the paper is light cream, with printing in black The card is free from all ornament, and has a very plain appearance, and it will take some time to become accustomed to it

A FRIGHTENED BULL. Early yesterday afternoon, as a number of bulls were being transferred from the Boston boat to the wharf, one of them got loose and started at a fearful rate up Front street. Upon reaching the ferry slip he charged upon a Mr. Foster, who was standing near a wagon, but John McKay rushed to his rescue with a boat hook, plunging it into the animal's neck and pushing him away from Mr. Foster. The infuriated animal started off again, heading for the railroad bridge, and making two leaps into it, he remained hanging with his legs between the sleepers and totally unable to extricate himself, but was hoisted out by means of a tackle. His owner had arrived by this time, and was so well pleased with the efforts of the men to capture him, that he signified his intention of treating them to a gallon of good old rye, but he had no sooner made the rash promise than the bull again liberated himself, and started for Haymarket square, where he was seized by a large dog who was the means of throwing him, when he was finally captured by a number of men who were in pursuit, but they didn't get the whiskey.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

CLIFTON, N. B., February 17th, 1873.

Dear Sir—In behalf of my family, I wish to acknowledge a debt of gratitude I owe Mr. James I. Fellows. My daughter had been ill with inflammation of the lungs, had raised large quantities of blood and purulent matter, attended with every symptom of consumption. After obtaining the attendance of two eminent physicians, who afforded her no relief, she was persuaded to try Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites. Upon taking two bottles we had every reason to believe she would be cured. Her physician was surprised to find her improvement so rapid, and advised her to continue its use which she did until her complete recovery. Two years have elapsed, during which time she has neither taken nor required any medicine, enjoying good health, and urges all who are afflicted with any lung or chest trouble to use it. Hypophosphites. Yours truly,

A LICKED OF HUSBANDRY.

Read at the Middlesex South Agricultural Fair, September 25, 1875.

BY J. C. CLARK.

Ethelbah (styled the Noble,) dies he died,
Called to Heaven's high growing soul and said
"Some I shall rest among the famed dead
Hear now my words, and I rest satisfied

Would that ye all to bless the world might live!
Then endless are unmeasured be the pure
Pleasures many injuries Echoes rest,
And invers each as labor, toil and grief

Thus lands the home of generations past,
Shall well tailed for those who here abide
For all the toil, and thus their meed provide —
This guess are sure while strength and patience last.

What life's wealth besides I have as right?
